University Librarian Doris Hulbert Retires

Endowment in Her Honor Established as an Expression of Appreciation

After almost 24 years at Jackson Library, University Librarian Doris J. Hulbert retires in June, leaving a remarkable legacy of exemplary service and leadership.

In her honor, the Friends of the Library has established the Doris Hulbert Endowment for Jackson Library and invites contributions from her colleagues, friends, and all members. Doris has been a staunch supporter of the Friends organization, and a contribution to this new endowment is a wonderful way to honor Doris and help Jackson Library.

Friends of the Library immediate past co-chair John May offered this tribute to Doris's tenure: "Doris's career spans the remarkable transformation from the labor-intensive library systems we recall as children to the information age with its reliance on computer technology. Under her leadership UNCG's Jackson Library has excelled. It is truly one of Guilford County's most valuable resources, boasting more items than any library in the Triad. Doris has led this transformation; indeed, her influence has been felt throughout the greater University of North Carolina system. She has served on more committees than I have space to mention; she has written, lectured, and consulted on every aspect of library science.

She has brought honors and gifts to Jackson Library too numerous to mention, including, most recently, the naming of Jackson Library as a National Literary Landmark and a bequest of one million dollars from the family of former North Carolina Governor Luther Hodges."

Since arriving at UNCG, Doris successively served as Head Circulation Librarian, Associate Director of the library, and, since 1989, Director. During her administration, Jackson Library was named a Literary

Landmark by Friends of Libraries USA, admitted to membership in the Association of Southeastern Research Libraries (ASERL), and acquired the one-millionth book for the Jackson Library collection.

Before coming to UNCG in 1980, Doris was head of the circulation department of the library at the University of Delaware for five years. She earlier served as head reference librarian in the Graduate School of Business Library at Indiana University.

Doris is a graduate of Montclair State College, where she also received a Master of Arts degree in English. She completed her Master of Library Science degree at Indiana University.

"Under Doris's leadership, UNCG's Jackson Library has excelled. ... indeed, she has led its remarkable transformation. Doris has brought numerous honors and gifts to the university ... including, most recently, the naming of Jackson Library as a National Literary Landmark."
